The Church Needs the Knights

KofC News Release 8/4/2010

128th Supreme Convention

Knights of Columbus should consider themselves to be the successors of the 72 disciples whom Jesus sent out to proclaim the kingdom of God, Cardinal Justin Rigali said in his homily for the convention Mass on Wednesday morning.

"You Knights must mobilize in the charity and truth of Christ, to support the Church and to be available to every brother and sister in need," said Cardinal Rigali, the archbishop of Philadelphia, who was the main celebrant and homilist.

Referring to the Gospel reading (Luke 10:1-9), he said that Knights of Columbus are vital members of the Church who bring the Gospel message through word and work in the world. Knights also receive their mission from the words of St. Paul in the first reading of the Mass (2 Timothy 4:1-8), he added: "Proclaim the word; be persistent whether it is convenient or inconvenient; convince, reprove, encourage through all patience and teaching ... put up with hardship, perform the work of an evangelist, fulfill your ministry."

The Mass was offered on the feast of St. John Vianney, the French priest who was the patron of the recently completed "Year for Priests." Cardinal Rigali said that St. John Vianney "did everything to promote the spiritual and corporal works of mercy, and was an apostle of the confessional."

He compared the saint to the Order's founder Father Michael McGivney, a Venerable Servant of God whose sainthood cause is before the Vatican. "Father McGivney lived his priesthood with the same ideals of pastoral charity" as St. John Vianney, the cardinal noted.

In carrying out their mission, Knights have the great example of Father McGivney, who stressed the principles of charity, unity, fraternity and patriotism. The convention's theme – "I Am My Brother's Keeper" – is a perfect expression of Father McGivney's vision, the cardinal continued. "From this theme emerges a great challenge for the Knights of Columbus: to be in solidarity with every member of society."

In conclusion, he said, "The Church needs you, blesses you and urges you onward in the name of Jesus."
